

Crime Prevention Unit Serves Up Safety Sessions & More

DPD's 2012 Neighborhood/Community Watch Workshop, Saturday, January 28, 2012

Residents who attended the 2012 Neighborhood/Community Watch Workshop digested a lot of good information along with a hearty lunch. Feedback on post event surveys convey: "I also attended last year and enjoyed it very much. Continue doing such great work"..."Great information. Glad I came."..."Continue to inform the public of these workshops. Very good sessions"..."It was really great. Glad you added the Edge program to the topics. Gives you hope for the community."

More than 150 participants were stakeholders from all police districts - including residents, police officers and presenters. Coordinated by the Crime Prevention Unit each year, the workshop promotes neighborhood watch, community oriented policing initiatives, public safety initiatives and community partners.

Left. Ofc Steve Hall (not pictured), Ofc. Penny Stewart, Sgt. Felisa Francis and Ofc. Curtis Knight know how to protect and 'serve'.

Below. Victims Advocate Jacqueline Lopez greets attendees.

Above. Caroline Farmer, of the NC Attorney General's Office, provided identity theft and fraud prevention strategies.

Above. Ofc. Reese Carson and Public Affairs Specialist Kimberle Walker present appreciation tokens to EDGE program founder/director Fran Alexander and EDGE student. Right. Workshop attendees.

Above. Milan Woods Neighborhood Watch Coordinator Rob Corns shares successful strategies implemented by his community.

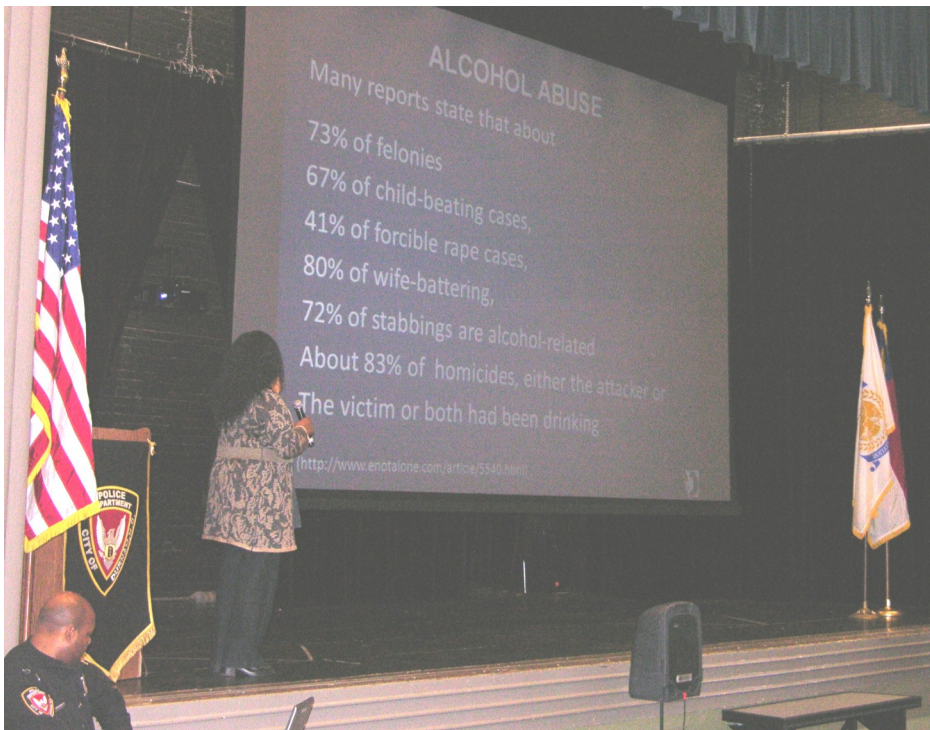

Human's Relations department employee Larry Revelle speaks about the agency's services.

The auditorium of the Holton Career and Resource Center provided a comfortable setting for approximately 130 residents who registered.

Above. Wanda Boone of Durham TRY (Together for Resilient Youth) spoke about alcohol abuse among youth and contributing factors - including marketing tactics.

Above. New Crime Prevention officer Lawrence Brown.

Above left and middle. Lunch time fellowship provided an informal opportunity for participants to discuss common interests, concerns and suggestions relating to quality of life and safety issues.

Attendees listen attentively to the Neighborhood Code Enforcement presentation.